Quito, Ecuador - August 23, 2010 - In many countries, the lives of children with Down Syndrome are steadily improving. Advances in medical care, better understanding of their developmental needs and increasing social acceptance are providing greater opportunities for these less fortunate children to learn and grow. Ecuador is no exception with their Fundacion Reina de Quito that serves 108 children with Down Syndrome.

Paul Scott, GreatLife's Chief Executive Officer, visited the Fundacion Reina de Quito during his recent trip to Ecuador and saw first-hand the phenomenal work their "Learning to Live" center was providing to these Down Syndrome children. Although a self-sustaining institution, GreatLife 4 All immediately recognized there was a way they could also help by donating VIDACELL.

"We know it's the little efforts that make a difference," said Gregg Sturz, President of GreatLife, "that's why we felt it was important to do our part by donating VIDACELL to this wonderful foundation. What they are doing for these children is remarkable."

"It's a fabulous gesture," said Maria Caridad Castillo, the Queen of Quito. "I've personally seen the many benefits of VIDACELL and this will certainly be a great asset for every child here. We are truly blessed for this generosity."

GreatLife 4 All is a charitable organization founded by GreatLife International and made possible by the collective power of all those who have joined our cause to change their life and the lives of others. We thank everyone for choosing to make a difference, knowing that everyone deserves a GreatLife!
